Back Alley Bikes is a non-profit community bike space with a focus on youth development, sustainable practices, and community access. This shop has been located in the Cass Corridor since 2000. Utilizing donated bikes, the shop empowers youth and adults through mechanical education and hands-on experience to promote a more confident and capable cycling culture. Their full-service retail shop, The Hub of Detroit, has been assisting the cyclists of Detroit since 2008, as well as selling affordable refurbished used bicycles with 100% of the proceeds supporting Back Alley Bikes to keep programs open and free. Hardcore Detroit was established in 2001 to provide urban dance entertainment for the city of Detroit and abroad. This amazing group has performed live and assisted with choreography for numerous events such as, the North American Auto Show, Detroit Institute of Arts and the Detroit Pistons - just to name a few. And not too long ago, Hardcore Detroit was voted "Best Dance Company" in the Real Detroit Readers Poll. This group is excited to bring the original Hip-Hop dance (Breakin') to Noel Night.

7:00-7:30, 8:00-8:30, 9:00-9:45 p.m. - William Close and the Earth Harp Collective perform.

Some of you will remember William and the Earth Harp Collective from their 2012 appearance on "America's Got Talent" where they finished third in this talent competition. And some of you will remember their previous visit to Detroit as part of "Mass Ensemble" during the Detroit Festival of the Arts. The Earth Harp was draped from the facade of the Detroit Institute of Arts to the front plaza on Woodward.

The Earth Harp is the largest stringed instrument on the planet. It was developed by Close in 1999. The body of the instrument rests on the stage and the strings travel out over the audience attaching to the back of the theater, turning the theater/concert hall, architecture and landscape into the instrument. The giant long strings are played with violin rosin covered gloves. The player runs their hands along the strings creating beautiful cello like tones. The reason it is titled the Earth Harp is do to the fact that the first time it was installed, the strings ran from one side of a valley 1000 ft across to the other side, turning the Earth / landscape into a giant harp. The Earth Harp has been installed around the world. The Strings have stretched to the top of the Seattle Space needle, to temples in Vietnam, in the famous Grand Theater of Macau and the Coliseum in Rome. Additionally, it has draped over amazing architecture in Hong Kong, India, and to the Kennedy Center and Lincoln center in the United States.

 64. WAYNE STATE UNIVERSITY BONSTELLE THEATRE | 3424 Woodward • WSU Theatre Box Office • 313-577-2972 • www.wsushows.com

2:00 & 7:00 p.m. — 'Twas the Night Before Christmas, by Michele L. Vacca (two performances on Dec. 7, tickets required, $20). A whimsical reimagining of the classic Christmas poem. The Sheldon family anxiously prepares for Christmas day by hanging stockings, decorating the Christmas tree and leaving cookies for Santa. After a grueling visit from Great Aunt Winifred and a particularly stressful Christmas Eve, young Virginia and her father share a late-night visit with the jolly old elf himself. He brings a sack full of friends with him. The WSU Alumni Association presents special discounted pricing and a pre-glow reception connected to the 7:00 performance HERE.

65. WAYNE STATE UNIVERSITY HILBERRY THEATRE | 4743 Cass • WSU Theatre Box Office • 313-577-2972 • www.theatreanddance.wayne.edu

2:00 & 8:00 p.m. — Big Love, by Charles L. Mee (two performances on Dec. 7, tickets required, $30). Fifty brides forced to marry their fifty cousins are on the run—only to be pursued and discovered by the fifty grooms. In this modern adaptation of The Suppliant Women by Aeschylus, you'll plunge and soar on a roller coaster of comedic mayhem, harsh realities and the occasional pop song. This dark comedy explores human rights, gender politics and love.
